To deepen the use of new technologies applied to the survey of the Territory and Architecture, the International Training Summer School has focused its studies on some places of indisputable historical and architectural value on the Italian scene.

The collaboration between young surveyors, teachers and university professionals, both national and foreign, optimizes the opportunities offered by new technologies for surveying the territory and, above all, initiates a new mentality for documentation (GIS - Global Information System) and management (DSS - Decision Support System and BIM - Building Information Modeling) of the territory and, in particular, of the "ecclesiastical cultural heritage".

The international character of the “International Training Summer School” is an opportunity for comparison between different methodologies of approach to work and technological systems, becoming an indisputable moment of enrichment of the cultural and professional background of the participants.

The development of the works follows the model of the “workshop school”, where teaching must be understood as the transmission of “know-how” from the Master to the Disciple.

The fundamental principle that animates the work of the International Training Summer School is that “Documentation is itself a cultural process that cannot be delegated to third parties” (Mons. Prof. Pietro Amato preface of the book "I Beni Culturali Ecclesiastici" edited by Pietro Grimaldi).
